INSIDE STORY: David Carradine's Final Days

By Natasha Stoyanoff

David Carradine entered the lobby of Bangkok's Swissotel Nai Lert Park luxury hotel at about 3 p.m. last Sunday asking for a favor. Would they mind if he stretched his fingers and played the grand piano?

The hotel staff said be our guest, and for three days in a row the Kill Bill star serenaded people in the lobby with movie tunes. His final performance was late Tuesday night - two days before he was found dead.

He was a great piano player, says the hotel's general manager, Aurelio Giraud. He was a man full of life. He was a very happy man. His face is smiling. A big smile.

Shocking Death

As the mystery deepens around Carradine's death, police have remained cautious about coming to conclusions. But they did confirm the shocking scene when a maid found the actor's body. Carradine was nude in the closet of his luxury suite with one rope tied around his neck and another. The two ropes were tied together, says police Lt. Gen. Worapong Chewprecha, the Associated Press reports. It is unclear whether he committed suicide or not, or he died of suffocation or heart failure. An autopsy has been ordered because of the unusual circumstances surrounding the death, says Dr. Nanthana Sirisap, director of Chulalongkorn Hospital's Autopsy Center.

Actor Appeared Happy

Colleagues and hotel guests who witnessed Carradine's demeanor days before he died described him as joyous and productive. By day, he was working hard on the set of his film, Stretch, and things were going great, says one member of the production. We were liking what we saw. We are as surprised and shocked as everyone else.

Even though he is 72, he didn't look old at all, says the hotel bartender, who described Carradine as strong, happy and dressed in jeans and T-shirt.

According to the police, Carradine entered his room Wednesday night, and the door stayed shut until the maid arrived to clean at 11 a.m.

Solution Kakuro 364

How to play Fill in the blank squares, using 1 to 9, without repeating any number in any line. The lines must be filled in with numbers that add up to the total in the shaded box at the top or beginning of each line. A number in the bottom half of the shaded box is the downward total; in the top half, it's the horizontal total.
